

GET 2 WEEKS FREE

▶ THE PRINT JOURNAL

▶ THE ONLINE JOURNAL

SUBSCRIBE NOW!

Welcome, Timothy D. Naegle Logout
My Account My Journal Help

U.S. Edition Home Today's Paper Video Blogs Journal Community Log In

World U.S. New York Business Markets Tech Personal Finance Life & Culture Opinion Careers Real Estate Small Business

Leisure & Arts Book Reviews Letters to the Editor Political Diary Columns

TOP STORIES IN Opinion

Best of the Web Today: Are Obama's Le...

11 of 12

Week in Review

12 of 12

ObamaCare Loses in Court

1 of 12

GLOBAL VIEW | DECEMBER 14, 2010

Europe Needs a Tea Party

By BRET STEPHENS

The euro isn't what ails the continent.

Article

Comments (15)

MORE IN OPINION »

Email Print Save This Like 3 + More Text

Once upon a not-very-long-ago time, Europe was the land of the future.

In 2005, American trendspotter Jeremy Rifkin published "The European Dream: How Europe's Vision of the Future is Quietly Eclipsing the American Dream." The same year, Washington Post reporter T.R. Reid came out with "The United States of Europe: The New Superpower and the End of American Supremacy." A year later we got "Why Europe Will Run the 21st Century" by British think-tanker Mark Leonard.

Whoops.

Say what you will about most seers, they usually have the sense to kick the proof of their predictions a century or more into the future. Sadly for our authors, Europe's dismal reckoning is unfolding now. Month after month, strikers, protestors and rioters in Athens, Paris, Dublin and London have offered their own verdict on Europe's future. So have the bond markets. Sooner or later this combined revolt of workers, students, pensioners and financiers will be joined—albeit for very different reasons—by middle-class taxpayers, mostly German, who will not endlessly finance the profligacy of people they're already inclined to detest.

What will happen then? Jean Monnet, the EU's founding father, famously predicted that Europe would be "forged in crises." In this crisis, it's just as likely that Europe will be broken by it.

For this the fault does not lie with the euro, as is so commonly alleged. It does lie with a political class that would not abide the terms they agreed to when they adopted the currency—the limits on deficit spending, flouted from the beginning; the fiscal requirements for joining the currency, conveniently ignored to get Greece in; the prohibition against bailouts, now comprehensively junked. A currency whose ground rules have been so utterly violated is not the sinner. It is the sinned against.

Either way, YOU reward your business.

LEARN MORE ▶

The Business Gold Rewards Card® OPEN

Give the Gift of Living in the Know.

Purchase a gift subscription to The Wall Street Journal for the gadget lovers on your list.

ORDER TODAY!

Email Newsletters and Alerts

The latest news and analysis delivered to your in-box. Check the boxes below to sign up.

On the Editorial Page

Best of the Web Today

View Full Image

Associated Press

Prince Charles and Camilla, Duchess of Cornwall, react as their car is attacked by angry protesters in London last week.

A more reasonable point is whether a continent that cannot contain its fiscal appetites should have ever attempted to subject itself to the discipline the euro was meant to instill. That's like asking whether its ever really worth enrolling an alcoholic in a 12-step. Europe can be awfully charming when it's on the sauce.

But it can be slovenly, surly and violent, too. So far Europe's financial tremors have hit mainly at its fringes. The €750 billion lending facility the EU established last spring has been more than adequate to bail out Greece and Ireland to the tune of €177 billion. But that's 23% of a fund for two countries whose combined GDP accounts for just 3.4% of the EU's. Next up is Portugal, with Spain and Italy likely not far behind. Collectively, they comprise 22% of the EU's GDP.

Portugal aside, those bailouts are almost certainly beyond Europe's reach. Yet European leaders are now attempting to rewrite the rules with a permanent bailout fund. The idea is to buy time and "confidence."

Good luck with that. Greece may already be violating the terms of its bailout. There is no long-term guarantee of a benign global economic environment that would give Europe's weaker economies time to recover. Berlin, Europe's proverbial paymaster, faces its own budgetary problems, and it can test German forbearance only so far. Nor is there any guarantee that a future Greek, Italian, Portuguese or Spanish government will abide by budgetary constraints imposed upon its predecessors. They will each have to make their own accommodations with their electorates. Democracies cannot be better than their own people.

There is the nub of Europe's problem. A notable difference between populist movements in the U.S. and Europe is that the American variety typically favors smaller and less-intrusive government. That's basically the tea party. It may be "Mad As Hell," as pollsters Doug Schoen and Scott Rasmussen write in their book on the movement, but it cleans up after itself. It also just elected a new Congress supposedly intent on reining in spending.

By contrast, the crowds that have so far paraded (or stomped) through Europe's capitals are an anti-tea party. They want more debt, not less, more entitlements, not fewer. Not yet demonstrating en masse, though they soon might, are nativist movements that have seized on legitimate fears about immigration to advance policy ideas that typically range from the stupid to the hateful. France's National Front hasn't gained the traction it has just by railing against Islamization; it also rails against pension reform and free trade.

The real question for Europe is whether there's an unsuspected tea party lurking somewhere in its electorate that can exercise meaningful political influence. Britain certainly has one: A new survey of British social attitudes finds the public "more Thatcherite now than in the 80s," when Mrs. Thatcher was in power. But of course the U.K. never was (and never will be) part of the euro zone. In German elections last year, the libertarian-leaning Free Democrats won their largest-ever mandate, though that amounted to less than 15% of the overall vote. As it is, they've mainly abandoned their pledge to cut taxes. Italy has routinely returned Silvio Berlusconi to power on promises to roll back the reach of the state. Alas, he never keeps them.

Such are the glimmers of hope. But the tests and trials that the EU faces are fast coming upon it. Bismarck once remarked that "Whoever speaks of 'Europe' is wrong. It is a geographical expression." We may yet find out that he was right.

Write to bstephens@wsj.com

SIGN UP

Manage Email Preferences

Recent Columns >

Stephens: Europe Needs a Tea Party

Stephens: China Joins the Axis of Evil

WikiLeaks: Liberals Grow Up

About Bret Stephens

Mr. Stephens writes the Journal's "Global View" column on foreign affairs, which runs every Tuesday in the U.S. and is also published in the European and Asian editions of the paper. He is a deputy editorial page editor, responsible for the editorial pages of the Asian and European editions of the paper, the columnists on foreign affairs, and the Far Eastern Economic Review. He previously worked for the paper as an op-ed editor in New York and as an editorial writer in Brussels for The Wall Street Journal Europe.

From March 2002 to October 2004 Mr. Stephens was editor-in-chief of The Jerusalem Post, a position he assumed at age 28. At the Post, he was responsible for the paper's news and editorial divisions. He also wrote a weekly column.

In 2004, Mr. Stephens was named a Young Global Leader by the World Economic Forum, where he is also a media fellow.

Raised in Mexico City and educated at The University of Chicago and the London School of Economics, Mr. Stephens is married and has three children.

Video >

Opinion Journal: Tax Deal Earmarks
4:42

Opinion Journal: Death Tax Revival?
6:29

Opinion Journal: Will It Stimulate the Economy?
5:40

More in Opinion

ObamaCare Loses in Court

McGurn: 'Billionaires On the Warpath'?

Burton G. Malkiel: Why Investors Need China in Their Portfolios

Islam's Christians

The Bond Rout and the Fed

Most Popular >

Read Emailed Video Commented Searches

- 1. Court Strikes at Health Law
- 2. Judge to Rule on Health Law
- 3. Opinion: Tim Pawlenty: Government Unions vs. Taxpayers

MORE IN OPINION »

Email Printer Friendly Order Reprints

Share: [Facebook] [Twitter] [LinkedIn] [Google+] [Dribbble] [StumbleUpon] [Delicious] [Reddit] [Pinterest] [Email] [Print] [Share]

Like 3 people like this. Be the first of your friends.

SPONSORED LINKS

BlackBerry® Smartphones
There Is A BlackBerry For Everyone. Find Your BlackBerry Smartphone BlackBerry.com

Penny stocks soaring 900%
Come experience penny stock gains with our free & accurate newsletter www.PennyStocksUniverse.com

1 Weird Tip To Belly Fat
Follow This 1 Rule And Lose 13lbs In 14 Days. NewsHealth6.com

Add a Comment

JOURNAL COMMUNITY

We welcome your thoughtful comments. Please comply with our Community rules. All comments will display your real name.

Text input field for adding a comment.

Track replies to my comment

Go to Comments tab

CLEAR

POST

Related Stories

Thuggery Sinks Protests and Boosts Coalition 12/10/2010

Strassel: The Devils Made Him Do It 12/10/2010

Josef Joffe: 'Multiculturalism Has Failed' 10/25/2010

Islamic Affirmative Action 9/16/2010

The Democrats' Great Depression 10/20/2010

Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows, Part I, The Next Three Days and Made in Dagenham | Film Reviews by Joe Morgenstern 11/18/2010

Greek Government Kid-Gloves Strikers Putting Society, Reforms at Risk 9/29/2010

Birth of a Movement: Tea Party Rode Wave of Discontent 10/29/2010

Related Videos

11 hrs ago
RIM CEO Mike Lazaridis at D: Dive Into Mobile

12/14/2010
Richard Holbrooke, U.S. envoy to Afghanistan, died Monday after suffering a ruptured aorta.

9/28/2010
Campaign Journal: Who's Winning the Money Duel?

4. Madoff Won't Go to Son's Funeral

5. Apple Readies iPhone for Verizon

Most Read Articles Feed

Latest Headlines

Court Strikes at Health Law

Tax Code Puts U.S. in Lasting Bind

Tax Bill Draws Wide Support in Senate

GOP Chief Seeks Second Term

WTO Backs U.S. in China Tire Dispute

Storm in Midwest Tied to 14 Deaths

Studies Question Heart Treatments

Madoff Won't Go to Son's Funeral

Crucial Trade Waterway Under Threat

Discharged Gay Veterans File Suit

More Headlines

CLICK HERE for Full Article Access - and get

TWO WEEKS FREE

UPGRADE NOW

WSJ.com subscribers enjoy:

- Deeper core business, industry and market news
Exclusive newsletters and alerts
Save & share article functionality within the Journal Community

Editors' Picks

Gas Rush Reshapes Town

New Manor With Old Flair

Room Service for Running Shoes

Thyssen's High-Tech Relay

Crosby Makes Hockey Look Easy

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

BACK TO TOP ▲

WSJ.com Account:

- My Account
- Subscriber Billing Info

Create an Account:

- Register for Free
- Subscribe to WSJ.com
- Sign up for WSJ Professional

Help & Information Center:

- Help
- Customer Service
- Contact Us
- New on WSJ.com
- Tour the new Journal

About:

- News Licensing
- Advertising
- Advertise Locally
- Conferences
- About Dow Jones
- Privacy Policy - Updated
- Subscriber Agreement & Terms of Use - Updated
- Copyright Policy
- Jobs at WSJ.com

WSJ.com:

- Site Map
- Home
- World
- U.S.
- New York
- Business
- Markets
- Market Data
- Tech
- Personal Finance
- Life & Culture
- Opinion
- Autos
- Careers
- Real Estate
- Small Business
- Student Journal
- Corrections

Tools & Formats:

- Today's Paper
- Video Center
- Graphics
- Columns
- Blogs
- Topics
- Guides
- Alerts
- Newsletters
- Mobile
- Tablet Edition
- Podcasts
- RSS Feeds
- Journal Community
- WSJ on Twitter
- WSJ on Facebook
- WSJ on Foursquare
- My Journal
- Portfolio

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Digital Network

- WSJ.com
- Marketwatch.com
- Barrons.com
- SmartMoney.com
- AllThingsD.com
- FINS: Finance, IT jobs, Sales jobs
- BigCharts.com
- Virtual Stock Exchange
- WSJ Radio
- ProfessorJournal.com
- WSJ U.S. Edition
- WSJ Asia Edition
- WSJ Europe Edition
- WSJ India Page
- Foreign Language Editions:
 - WSJ Chinese
 - WSJ Japanese
 - WSJ Portuguese
 - WSJ Spanish

Copyright ©2010 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved